

If it's not your money, it's a crime.

Stopping financial exploitation is everyone's business.

Signs include:

- Cashing checks without permission.
- Sudden changes in bank accounts or banking practices.
- A person with the account owner withdraws a lot of money.
- Adding extra names on a bank signature card.
- Unapproved ATM card withdrawals.
- Sudden changes in a will or other financial documents.
- Forged signature on financial transactions or property titles.
- Unexplained missing money or valuables.
- Unpaid bills despite having enough money.
- Relatives suddenly claiming rights to a person's affairs and property.
- Unexplained transfer of assets.

Taking the money or property of people with disabilities, or who are 65 or older, is a crime.
